

Andrew Asten

Andrew is a management consultant, public policy analyst, and former commercial lawyer, and has worked with firms including The Boston Consulting Group, and global law firm Herbert Smith Freehills.

He is currently Chief of Staff to the Minister for Human Services, the Hon Alan Tudge MP, and has professional experience across a wide range of the areas of Government activity including in infrastructure, telecommunications, competition and regulation, foreign affairs, defence, government service delivery, and public sector reform.

He has a Masters in International Relations from Cambridge University where he studied as a Gates Scholar, and degrees in Law and Economics from Monash University. Andrew has a keen interest in NGOs and not-for-profits and has served as Chair of the Board of the Oaktree Foundation and a local service organisation called St Hilary's Hope. He is married to Grace and they have a one-year-old son.

